S. V. WHITE FAILS AGAIN.

Shrinkage of Industrial Stocks Forces Him to the Wall.

EXCITEMENT ON 'CHANGE.

He Makes a Simple Statement of His Inability to Meet Engagements.

FERRIS & KIMBALL ASSIGN.

Late this Afternoon It Was Believed the Wall Street Crisis Had Passed.

Shortly after the opening hour on the Stock Exchange today the excitement, which had been at fever heat owing to the slump in Cordage and the failure of the big Trust, was intensified by the announcement from President S. V. White that he was unable to meet his engagements.

The shrinkage in the industrial, in which he has been one of the largest operators on the street, had again caused his downfall. The effect of the announcement was to produce further depression in the market and there was a general decline in the whole.

Brokers were dropped in price all the way from 1 to 50 per cent, and Manhattan traded at 115, a decline of 104 points from last night's closing prices.

The affairs of "Leacon" White have been discussed in the street for several days past, and it was generally believed that he had failed with more stock than he was able to carry.

It was denied, however, that he was embarrassed, but the tremendous shrinkage in values during the last two days was more than he could stand.

He was admitted to membership in the Stock Exchange May 8, 1893.

White Makes a Statement.

Leacon White made the following brief statement in writing:

To the Members of the Press: The unexpected drop in all securities has made it impossible to realize on securities, or to credit margins to my customers.

S. V. WHITE.

Mr. White was unable to fix the amount of his liabilities, or in fact, to tell just how he stood.

His office was besieged all the morning by customers and friends.

It was said at his office that the failure was anticipated even as late as 10 o'clock this morning.

announcing that while there was no legal liability remaining, he felt a moral obligation to pay everything in full.

Paid Creditors in Full.

On Jan. 1, of this year Mr. White announced that he had paid every one of his creditors in full and had started the new year with clean sheets.

Mr. White applied for readmission to the Stock Exchange, and was taken back again, his creditors giving him a release.

Stephen Van Cullen White was born Aug. 1, 1851, in Chatham County, N. C. He received little or no schooling until he was eighteen years old. His first money was earned in trapping muskrats, whose skins he sold.

STEPHEN V. WHITE.

Through the generosity of an elder brother he entered Knox College in 1870, and after graduating he entered the employ of his brother-in-law, Mr. J. H. White, as bookkeeper.

Later he took up the study of law, entering the office of Brown & Kasson. He was admitted to the bar Nov. 4, 1876, and soon gained fame and wealth.

He was United States District Attorney of Iowa for some time. In 1885 he turned his attention from law to the banking business, and became one of the firm of Marvin & White, in Wall Street.

The business was successful from the start. Mr. Marvin withdrew in 1887 and Mr. White continued alone until 1882 when Arthur Claiborn and F. W. Hopkins became associated with him under the name of S. V. White & Co.

He is reported to have cleared his first million in the lumber trade, Lakeview and Western deal of 1884.

Mr. White has long been a resident of Brooklyn, where he has an elegant residence at 210 Columbia Heights. He was a great admirer of the late Henry Ward Beecher and was a trustee of the Plymouth Church for many years.

His pet law is aviation, and he was President of the American Aeronautical Society in 1883. In politics Mr. White is a Republican, and he was sent to Congress in 1885.

Panic in Opening Hours.

The opening hour of the Stock Exchange was fraught with anxiety to those interested in stock dealings.

A crash of some kind was expected, and a general liquidation in the industrial was looked for.

The first indications of continuous liquidation were manifested in the trading in General Electric, Chicago Gas and Sugar, and several large operators in these stocks were said to be throwing their holdings on the market.

Within fifteen minutes after the slump began, General Electric had gone down in big jumps, and a panic had set in.

Enormous quantities of the stock had been thrown overboard, and the most intense excitement prevailed.

At the same time Sugar dropped from 80 1/2 to 63 and Chicago Gas from 74 to 59, while National Lead Trust sold at 20 1/2, American Cotton Oil at 30, Whiskey at 20 1/2, and Rubber at 30, declines all the way from 6 to 22 points.

Brokers All Excited.

The floor of the Board Room at the opening hour was thronged with brokers, who were rushing about with frenzied haste, and feverish anxiety written upon their faces.

Every one seemed to be under a strain, and the evidence of their excited feeling could not be suppressed. Rumors were in circulation that more firms were in trouble and in fact they were prepared for any sort of sensational developments, for the collapse of the cordage Trust had made the panic feeling in the Exchange more pronounced than at any time since the present downward movement began.

The galleries extending all the way around the big hall, from the Broad Street entrance to New, were packed with spectators, most of whom had evidently come there simply to watch the game of millions that was being played by the excited brokers on the floor below, but many of them undoubtedly had a more lively interest in the struggle, and watched the proceedings with strained and anxious faces.

Just before the close of the cable from the London market came a strong report for American securities, and this gave some support to the market at the opening.

Contrary to expectations, most of the "Industrial" opened at an advance over last night's closing prices—Sugar at 85 and touching 86 1/2, an advance of 1 1/2 per cent; Lead Trust at 24, an advance of 1/2 per cent; Chicago Gas at 74 1/2, an advance of 1/2 per cent; General Electric at 80, last night's price; Whiskey at 21 1/2, a decline of 1/2.

Fully a hundred brokers were gathered in the southwest corner of the Board room, where the industrial were traded in, jumping up and down in their excitement and yelling like wild Indians.

HARRIS IS COMPOSED.

It Has Been Decided Not to Ask for a Reprieve.

His Mother Goes to Sing Sing to Await His Death.

The Doomed Wife-Poisoner Guarded with Great Care.

Mrs. Harris, the mother of Carlisle W. Harris, the condemned wife-poisoner, arrived in this city this morning from Northfield, Mass., on the Norwich line steamboat city of Boston accompanied by her son, Allan Harris.

The steamboat reached the dock at the foot of Watts street a few minutes after six o'clock, almost an hour late on account of the heavy weather on the Sound, and Mrs. Harris and her son were the last passengers to leave the boat.

She boarded the steamboat at New London last night, shortly before the sailing hour, and secured a double stateroom for herself and son. She did not register, as she desired to avoid observation, and some minutes after the last passengers disembarked this morning she made her appearance at the entrance to the cabin, leaning on the arm of Allan, who carried a satchel.

The unfortunate woman tried very hard to avoid attracting attention by hurrying up the pier, but her identity was soon discovered, and she was watched by longshoremen and sailors on the dock.

Neither son nor mother walked up to the Desborough station of the Ninth Avenue Elevated and entered a north-bound train.

Mrs. Harris, with her son, Allan, and a lawyer, William F. Howe, at his office in Centre street shortly before 10 o'clock and was taken to the city hall by a police officer nearly half an hour, she then passed out of the office and boarded a Fourth Avenue car for the Grand Central Depot, where she took the 10:35 train for Sing Sing. Allan Harris accompanied her.

Shortly after his interview with Mrs. Harris, lawyer Howe received an "Evening World" reporter.

"Mrs. Harris," he said, "talked with me a long time this morning and is perfectly resigned to the fate of her son. She goes to Sing Sing this morning and will remain until her boy is executed."

"The case is completely at an end, and there remains nothing but the execution. We have done our best, and the Governor has seen fit to render an adverse decision. We will not ask even for a reprieve, nor shall we ask the United States courts to intervene."

"The mother and myself to do so—to prolong the agony by such a course."

"The innocence of Carlisle has been established before the people even by the Governor's statement, which is a matter of fact. It is a matter of fact that the poor woman is perfectly satisfied with our conduct of the case."

The Williamsburg police are in a whirl of excitement today over the discovery of what is either a stupendous jewelry robbery or a case of smuggling on a grand scale.

Over $100,000 worth of jewelry of all descriptions, including set and unset diamonds, rubies, sapphires, emeralds and pearls, of which there is a double handful, besides bracelets, rings, earrings, necklaces and other coronets, all set with gems of the first water, was this morning locked up in a closet in Capt. Short's Fifth Precinct station-house, in Bedford Avenue, guarded by a big policeman, awaiting the taking of an inventory of the valuables.

KEPT ALIVE BY A BOY OF 12.

Agent Fringle Finds a Destitute but Deserving Family.

Dennis Ford, a boy about twelve years of age, was assigned before Justice McMahon in the Yorkville Court for begging this morning and discharged.

Agent Fringle found the boy on West Seventy-third street yesterday and followed him to his home at 207 West Sixty-ninth street. The place was scrupulously neat, and the boy's four little brothers and sisters eagerly devoured the old pieces of bread which he brought them in a basket.

The agent found that Jeremiah, the father, who is a builder's helper, had been out of work all winter. The mother is ill, with consumption, and four children lived at home. David, aged seven, is ill with hemorrhage of the lungs. The others are Julia, aged four, John, aged three, and Baby Mary, another child, aged nine, is in a hospital suffering from a bad disease.

Little Dennis, who has a good record at the grammar school at Eighty-second street and Amsterdam Avenue, has been the mainstay of the family. After getting clothes, shoes and food and fuel for the family Agent Fringle left some money, and saw the child doing a square turn.
